Kalamunda Community Centre

Community Engagement Report
2020

Background

Kalamunda Community Centre

In January 2019, the City appointed the design team led by architect Edwin Bollig of Bollig Design Group for the new Kalamunda Community Centre, replacing the Jorgensen Park Pavilion, which has reached its end of life.

The initial concept was developed in consultation with the Kalamunda Community Learning Centre and other potential users of the site. The new premises will be accessible for a wide range of user groups of many ages and abilities. The current pavilion is currently utilised by After School Arts, Kalamunda Community Learning Centre, The Mankind project and the Darling Range Branch of the Naturalists Club.

Council adopted the centre’s design in June 2019, following extensive consultation with the Kalamunda Community Learning Centre and Community Reference Group. Integrated property and construction group Pindan began construction works in February 2020. The official commencement of construction on 31 January 2020 was attended by Premier Mark McGowan, Hasluck MP Ken Wyatt and Kalamunda MP Matthew Hughes.

The centre was funded from the Federal Government ($1 Million), Lotterywest ($2.5 Million) and the State Government of Western Australia ($3 Million) with a $150,000 contribution from the Kalamunda Community Learning Centre.

From March to May 2020, consultation was undertaken to seek naming suggestions for the new facility.

In accordance with Council policy, any person was invited to submit suggestions although submissions had to include relevant information in order to meet the criteria set out by the City.

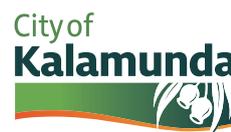

Of the 80 names submitted, six were shortlisted by a selection panel for inclusion in the public voting poll. The shortlisted names* were: Bibbulmun Community Centre; Cala Munda Community Centre; Cala Community Hub; Jorgensen Community Centre; Kaardijin Community Centre and Kalamunda Community Centre.

Public voting on the shortlisted names was held from August to September 2020.

The City of Kalamunda engaged with stakeholders to ensure they were kept informed during the construction of the centre. Engagement was designed to increase community awareness and benefits of the project; and to create a sense ownership, including asking the community to name the new centre.

Community Consultation for the project was delivered in line with a Communications and Engagement Plan.

Engagement ran from 24 March 2020 to 30 September 2020 and was supported by an integrated marketing campaign.

Top six shortlisted names

The following rationales were offered by the community when submitting their nominations and was provided to the community when voting for their final choice.

Bibbulmun Community Centre

I have made this suggestion because Kalamunda is already an Aboriginal name and due to the start of the iconic Bibbulmun Track it would be a fitting name for the new community centre. It also honours the original inhabitants of this region.

Cala Munda Community Centre

Ties in well with Kalamunda's Aboriginal history.

Cala Community Hub

'Cala' - signifying home and bush.

'Hub' - a centre around which other things revolve, a focus of activity.

Jorgensen Community Centre

Appropriate as this is where the building is located and residents are familiar with its location.

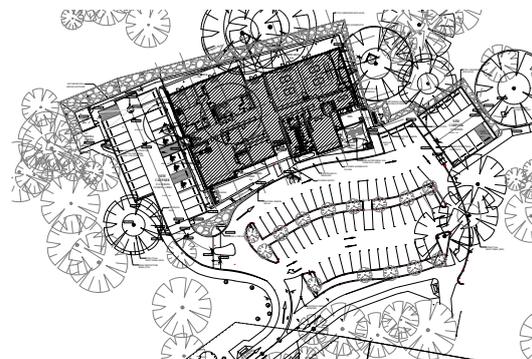

Kaartdijin Community Centre

Kaartdijin means 'knowledge' in the language of the Noongar people. This new place is a space for people to come together and share their knowledge - an intergenerational space that is placed on the Kalamunda terminus of the Bibbulmun Track.

Kalamunda Community Centre

I see no reasonable explanation to change the name. The community centre is for the use of the whole of the City of Kalamunda and the current name is easily recognisable by residents and visitors alike.

The name Kalamunda Community Centre (KCC) works. It says exactly what and where it is, is a 'Community' Centre servicing the Kalamunda Shire/City community.

Note: The City understands Cala/Karla also means Fire.

Construction of the new Kalamunda Community Centre at Jorgensen Park is moving ahead, both on time and budget, with the main building framework up and roof expected in coming weeks.

Expected to be operational by March 2021, the centre's multi-purpose design includes seven activity rooms, two halls, office space, a kitchen, bathrooms, outdoor play areas and a viewing deck.

In a nod to its bush surrounds, the completed design will feature a timber and stone exterior finish. See more

Additional comments supplied with Engage online Survey

Note: the following unsolicited comments were supplied in addition to the survey questions by participants on Engage.

16	I believe Jorgensen needs to be in the name for a few reasons. The history of Jorgensen Park. The name is so well known for the location. Another name would be "Jorgensen Mandjar centre" mandjar meaning Meeting Place in Noongar language.
42	I'm all for simplicity and accuracy. Nothing wrong with being proud of the name Kalamunda ... Hence my preference. Kalamunda Community Centre.
45	Would prefer Kalamunda Learning Centre, or a name that infers "learning"
47	I've lived on Kalamunda since 1950. To name the centre Kalamunda Community centre is self explanatory and does not require anyone to ask what it is Unlike some of our Australian football ovals as an example. KCC says it all.
67	Shame you can't tie Kalamunda and Katitjin together - that would have been a nice blend and makes sense - ie. Kalamunda Learning.
73	The name Kalamunda already based on two Aboriginal words, no need to introduce another completely new Noongar word or to use Bibbulmun as the northern trail terminus is already named that. The surrounding reserve and trails could still be Jorgenson park.
